

Mokena Man Fatally Hurt In Wreck

John Horras Dies In LaSalle of Injuries Received In Wreck

John Horras, aged 45 years, of Mokena, fireman aboard the Rocky Mountain limited locomotive of the Rock Island Lines, which was derailed and overturned at LaSalle last Saturday afternoon, died at the St. Mary hospital in that city Tuesday morning at 8:30 o'clock of injuries he sustained in the wreck.

His condition had been regarded as practically hopeless since Sunday morning when a rare infection, gas gangrene, developed in his right leg which was severed below the knee as the giant locomotive overturned at a point about 1,000 feet west of the LaSalle depot. Before he died, it was disclosed at the inquest Tuesday Mr. Horras in a statement to his physician had declared that he was unaware that the engine in which he was riding had left the rails until the crash came.

When the infection set in Sunday, Mr. Horras lapsed into a semi-consciousness from which he did not rally. Dr. J. W. Geiger of LaSalle who attended him, said that in addition to the severed leg, Mr. Horras also suffered from a deep scalp wound and other serious internal injuries.

What made this tragedy exceptionally hard on the family was the fact that Mr. Horras was always considered of his family, had secured a pass and urged his wife, daughter Alice and son Jack to take a few weeks vacation by going to visit with Mrs. Horras's sister who resides on a ranch in Thermopolis, Wyoming. Another daughter, Mrs. Marie Jacobs, her husband and her little brother James, remained at home. Mrs. Horras and the children previously mentioned left last Thursday on the Rocky Mountain limited on their western trip.

They arrived at Thermopolis Saturday noon. They were met at the depot by the sister of Mrs. Horras and the former's husband. They went into an ice cream parlor and about half an hour later a telegram came for Mrs. Horras saying Mr. Horras had been badly hurt in an accident and to hurry back.

About ten minutes after the accident occurred the round house foreman at Blue Island telephoned Wm. Semmler, neighbor of Mr. Horras to get word to his family of the accident and said Mr. Horras was in a very serious condition.

A short time later the sister of Mrs. Horras telephoned to the Semmler home from Thermopolis, Wyoming asking for particulars of the accident and when advised of the seriousness of the case, Mrs. Horras and her children caught a return train in 45 minutes and had no time to reach the ranch they were to visit. Misfortune seemed to stalk on the path of the Horras family as the train Mrs. Horras was returning on ran into a washout and came near being wrecked. The engine was badly damaged and the train was delayed over two hours.

The married daughter Marie was at her father's bedside within two hours after he was brought to the LaSalle hospital. Responding to his constant call on Sunday, his little three year old son Jimmie was brought to his bedside by two friends of the Horras family, Mrs. Frank A. Tooley and Mrs. George Rinke, both of Mokena. Mrs. Horras, daughter Alice and son Jack arrived late Monday afternoon from Thermopolis and had an opportunity to see and talk with Mr. Horras before he passed on Tuesday morning.

Following the death of Mr. Horras an inquest was held at LaSalle and the body was then removed to the Fred Dames undertaking rooms in Joliet where the body was prepared for burial and was brought to the home in Mokena Wednesday afternoon. Funeral Friday morning at 9 o'clock from the St. Mary Catholic church in Mokena with burial in the St. Mary cemetery adjoining the church.

The sympathy of the entire community goes out to the grief stricken family.

John Horras was born in Germany, April 30, 1887. At the age of ten years he came to Chicago with his father and brother and they made their home in that city with relatives July 30, 1913 he was united in marriage with Miss Catherine McGee in Blue Island. They resided in Peoria for a short time and located in Mokena in April 1921 and they have resided here since with the exception of two years residence in Chicago. To this union were born two daughters, Marie and Alice and two sons Jack and James, who with the widow survive.

He was employed as fireman on the Rock Island railroad for 24 years.

He fired on the Golden State Limited and of late had fired on the Rocky Mountain Limited. He had only fired several weeks for the engineer who had charge of the engine which was wrecked.

Mr. Horras was a prince of a man and made and had a legion of warm friends who were deeply shocked and grieved at his tragic demise.

Excessive speed was believed to have been the cause of the wreck of the Rocky Mountain Limited. Eye witnesses declare that when the engine rounded the curve near the LaSalle depot it was "weaving" on the tracks. It rolled from side to side so sharply that the "pony" trucks of the locomotive jumped the rails and the engine rode the ties. The train was composed of two sections and consisted of 17 heavy coaches. The train was speeding westward at a 45 miles per hour clip. After leaving the rails the engine continued off the tracks, hitting the Westclox switch point, which threw the trucks of the engine further from the tracks and put it in direct line with a coal car which was standing on the west end of the siding near its junction with the main west line of the railroad.

The locomotive struck the coal car with tremendous force, doubling it up and ripping open the heavy sheet iron side of the car, then up setting on its side just a few feet from the southeast corner of the Westclox building occupied by the shipping room.

As the big locomotive turned over on its side, also upsetting the tender, two baggage coaches directly behind the tender also plunged from the rails, but remained upright and the front trucks of a third baggage coach also slipped off the tracks.

Immediately after the wreck, passengers and eyewitnesses rushed to the aid of the engineer and fireman.

Engineer Harry Clewer, aged 58 years of Chicago was found with 6 fractured ribs, an injured spine, a fractured shoulder and severe shock. He was taken to the People's hospital in Peru.

The fireman was found with his leg severed below the knee. Members of the train crew ripped off a length of bell cord and applied a tourniquet to stop the profusely flowing blood. He was at once taken to the St. Mary hospital at LaSalle, two miles from the depot.

About 1500 feet of track was ripped up. The Silvis wrecking crew arrived in LaSalle about four o'clock Saturday afternoon with a 160 ton derrick and other equipment needed for the huge task of hoisting the 300 ton locomotive and moving it about 25 feet to the tracks from which it had leaped, while the Blue Island wrecking crew brought a 150 ton derrick. The engine was placed back on the rails at two o'clock Monday morning and was later taken to the Silvis shops for repairs. Section men were called out along the line to help clear up the wreck. Clinton Kraus and Edward Schoen of Mokena were called out also.

The Golden State Limited another crack Rock Island train was derailed at LaSalle at 11 o'clock Saturday night. This wreck was caused by the rails on a sidetrack giving way under the weight of the big engine, causing the wheels to drop to the roadbed. The engine was moving slowly. No damage was done to the train but it took four hours to get the engine back on the rails.

Coroner L. D. Howe of Streator conducted the inquest in the death of Mr. Horras Tuesday morning.

The coroner going to the bedside of the engineer in the People's hospital in Peru, was told by the elderly engineer that he became aware of the derailment at the LaSalle depot immediately after the "pony" trucks on the locomotive leaped the rails and he at once applied all the brakes, including the emergency brake, and was so engaged when the engine hit a coal car on the siding which caused the engine to overturn. The railroad officials conducted an investigation, but blamed no one for the fatal wreck.

Excessive speed made in order to make up for 20 minutes of lost time is said to be the chief cause of the tragic accident.

To Announce Mokena School Text Book List

A full approved list of text books to be used in the Mokena public school will be published in this paper next week. Pupils are urged to get their books before school starts. Principal McCleery will name the day to bring in second hand books for sale.

Tinley Truck And Auto Collide; No One Injured

A truck of the Elmore Poultry Co., in Tinley Park was hit by an auto at the intersection of 159th street and Oak Park ave., at Bachelors Grove north of Tinley Park Saturday. The truck was going north and the auto was going west on 159th street. Both cars were up set but no one was hurt. The truck was loaded with dressed poultry and cases of eggs and it is said that not an egg was broke.

James Marti of Mokena witnessed the accident and was preparing to take the victims to a hospital but was pleasantly surprised to find that no one was hurt.

Tinley and Midlothian Lions To Sing In Chicago Festival

The Tinley Park and Midlothian Lions are all set for the big song battle between the Lions and Kiwanis clubs at the song and music festival to be held in Soldiers Field in Chicago Saturday night of this week. The official song will be "America The Beautiful". Two verses of this song will be sung by the competing clubs. The song battle will begin at 8:23 p. m., daylight saving time and will be broadcast over radio station WGN. The Tinley and Midlothian Lions held their final rehearsal in the Woman's Club Building in Midlothian Wednesday night.

Tinley Fisherman Uses Shovel To Bail Out Boat

Captained by the veteran Tinley Park fisherman "Patsy" Koehler, a group of Tinley Park fishermen in which were Fred Ahrens, August F. Sippel, George Lorenz had an interesting fishing trip at Bath, Illinois the past week. When the gallant fishermen were out in the middle of the lake a storm came up and a heavy rain set in. The boat started filling with water and Mr. Sippel saved the boat from sinking by bailing out the water with a scoop shovel.

The fishermen had quite a fight landing an 11 pounder. It took three men to land the "monster".

Fred Ahrens had a keen intuition as to where the fish were and advised the fishermen not to cast for fish at certain spots as he knew there were no fish there.

Even tho it rained most of the time, the Tinley fishermen enjoyed a few good fish fries.

Tinley R. N. A. to Award Quilt

The Royal Neighbors of Tinley Park have been busy for the past several weeks making a patch work quilt which will be soon on exhibition to the public. This quilt is a full sized one and a beautiful piece of needlecraft made up of some hundred and seventy-five pieces of virgin wool tailoring samples from cloth costing three to six dollars per yard. They represent some of the last season's line of The Nash Co., The Nation's Tailors and are donated by their local representative, A. O. Postkett, to the Royal Neighbors.

The ladies will award the quilt as a prize at a buncio party to be given by them September 27th.

The actual cloth value of the quilt is over $40, not including the value of the time of the ladies spent in the needlework upon the quilt.

Rotogravure Edition Underway Now

This paper is now engaged in preparing for publication, one of the most unique and valuable editions ever put out by any paper in this section, this new feature being a pictorial rotogravure album. In this album will appear the pictures of the various church groups, organizations, places of interest and of local historical significance as well as other features. This album will not be only for a day or so, but will be kept in the homes of this section for years to come. Pictures are now being taken in all parts of the territory. It is the aim of the publisher to have the album ready for distribution in about a month or six weeks.

In another column appears the picture of the official photographer and a writeup about him.

Watch for further particulars.

Expect 5,000 At Milk Asso. Picnic Aug. 20

Fully 5,000 people are expected to attend the picnic to be held at the Frankfort Grove by the 13th district of the Pure Milk Association this Saturday. Farmers and dealers who are affiliated with the association are sponsoring this outing. The following locals compose the 13th district: Mokena, Tinley Park, Orland Park, Plainfield, Wilmington, Manhattan and Joliet. Harry Storm of New Lenox is the chairman of the outing program.

Following are some of the features scheduled: ball game in the afternoon between teams representing the east and west sections of the district. A milk maids race in which girls from 16 to 22 years of age will participate will determine the inter-district milking championship. Other attractions will be a tug of war, nail driving contest, hog calling, slipper kicking, and a rolling pin throw in which the housewives will participate. Races of all kinds will be provided for the children.

The families attending will bring basket lunches. They will be provided with milk and ice cream by the association.

The principal speaker at the outing will be Don Gyer, Chicago market manager of the Pure Milk Association.

Orland Park Firemen Plan Big Affair

The biggest Labor Day celebration ever held in Orland Park is being planned for by the Orland Volunteer Fire Department. Fire departments from six neighboring towns are expected to take part. There will be a monster parade nearly a mile long in which the fire departments, band, organizations, the mayor and village board, business men and others will participate. The parade will proceed to the forest preserve where the picnic will be held. This year there will be a lot of new games and races never seen here before. There will be a water fight, greased pole climbing, horse polo game, and games for the kiddies. Prizes will be given. There will be a band concert by the Orland Park band at 2:30 p. m. daylight saving time. Dancing at 7 p. m. with music by Pat Gallagher's Orchestra from Joliet.

The parade starts promptly at 1 p. m., daylight saving time. All floats are invited and will be considered for valuable cash prizes.

This will be the third annual picnic of the Orland Park Fire Department.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson,
Illinois Press Association

Illinois officials are expected to decide soon what action will be taken as to the use of the state's share of more than $5,000,000 for highway construction allotted from the $120,000,000 emergency federal appropriation for road work. It is probable that the state highway department will call for bids next month on numerous projects to be built with the federal aid before July 1, 1933. The federal act, it is said, provides for the fixing of a minimum wage on all work to be done under the federal loan. A state law on the same subject held up construction work in the state last year, but finally was declared invalid by the State Supreme court.

Payment of taxes with school teachers' pay warrants has been authorized in writs of mandamus granted to two Chicago teachers by the State Supreme court. The "N. S. F." law provides that the Chicago board of education may issue checks to teachers and that these checks may be marked "not sufficient funds" and draw 6 per cent interest until such time as the board may be able to pay them. Spokesmen for Chicago's 14,000 distressed school teachers are considering the feasibility of petitioning for a special session of the state legislature to repeal the "N. S. F." law, as this statute is further complicating efforts to obtain cash for the teachers' long past due salaries.

A board of supervisors has no power to extend the delinquent date for the payment of taxes beyond the time fixed by law, Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom has advised the state's attorney at Princeton. The opinion also held that the board lacks authority to suspend the penalty for nonpayment.

A movement is under way to improve the food and cooking at state institutions under the department of public welfare. Director Rodney H. Brandon has appointed two committees, composed of institution officials and employees. One will rewrite food and supply specifications; the other will write stiffer and more detailed qualifications for cooks, and propose means for the improvement of kitchen personnel and organization.

Mere possession of articles which might be used in making or handling liquor does not constitute a violation of the state prohibition law, Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom has ruled. The opinion went to State's Attorney R. C. Rice of Galesburg, who asked concerning a store which sells all sorts of bottles, jugs, funnels, presses and other similar articles. It was further stated in the opinion that if it can be proved that such articles were being purchased and used for the illegal manufacture of intoxicating liquor, and that the seller had knowledge of that fact, then he would be guilty.

Bids on new lights for the state house yard and new heating equipment for the arsenal were opened recently by the division of architecture and engineering. Remodeling of the arsenal heating system to modernize it is expected to cost upwards of $7,000. New heating equipment was recently installed in the state house, the Supreme court building and the executive mansion, and the arsenal work will complete the project. Bids were also opened for two new buildings at the Manteno State hospital.

Confronted with requests for approximately a thousand miles of highways and suggestions for major changes in the state road laws, the Hunter future road commission will meet in Springfield late in September to consider its report. The commission was created at the last regular session of the general assembly to study and report on road building. Its report will be presented to the session of the legislature which convenes next January. Several meetings have been held in Springfield, which attracted delegates from all parts of the state, many making requests for highways while others suggested changes in existing roads.

Books dealing with the present economic situation will be emphasized by the library extension division at its exhibit in the exposition building during the state fair at Springfield, August 20 to 27. Included in the display will be the books chosen by noted American social scientists for inclusion in the list, "For Thinking America," published by the American Library association. These books deal with the economic and financial crisis in American and in other lands, stimulating and thought-provoking discussions of the problems of today.

Senator Martin R. Carlson, chairman of the state commission on taxation and expenditures, conferred recently with Gov. Louis L. Emmerson as to a special session of the legislature to consider a sales tax. There will be no session, unless two-thirds of the members of both houses pledge their support to a sales tax as an emergency measure to relieve the finances of the state. The sales tax will be proposed at the next regular session, when it likely will be one of the most important projects considered.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has approved the purchase of Apple River canyon for conversion into an Illinois state park, the department of public works and buildings has announced. The canyon is located in the northwest part of the state, five miles from Warren, and seven miles from Stockton. Sanction of the plan for the preservation of this historic and scenic section of Jo Daviess county, according to the state officials, followed the recommendation of the state park advisory board and of Director H. H. Cleveland, of the department of public works and buildings, through which the state develops and maintains its parks and memorials.

In a two-day examination concluded recently in the office of John G. Millhouse, director of the state department of mines and minerals, fifty applicants took the tests for state certificates. Examinations were given for mine managers, mine examiners, electric hoisting engineers and steam hoisting engineers.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, acting upon information assembled by the state department of agriculture, has issued a proclamation that, in effect, will bar the importation of all commodities that might transport the European cornborer into Illinois from sections of the country wherein it has gained a foothold. The necessity of this movement on the part of Illinois, as explained by state officials, has arisen because of the fact that the federal government has discontinued its quarantine service in the infested territory.

John H. Craig, assistant director of the state department of agriculture, in response to numerous requests from farmers who are interested in obtaining loans to carry on beef breeding operations, has outlined a plan for the creation of a "Beef Cattle Breeding Credit corporation." The idea, he states, has been submitted to a number of authorities on banking and experienced agricultural economists. The agricultural products committee of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, headed by Clifford V. Gregory, has endorsed the plan as practical and helpful. The project, to succeed, he said, must have the support of organized agriculture.

Forty-two members of the state highway police department, including a sergeant and two men from each of the fourteen districts in the state have been instructed on the use of the teletype system in the office of Chief Walter Moody. The teletype system was installed recently and is expected to be of assistance to the department in transporting messages and descriptions of persons sought by the department. It extends from Cairo to the Wisconsin line. A male stenographer will be in charge of the message system day and night in each of the district offices.

Two more prominent Illinoisans are scheduled to speak over radio station WMAQ on the Illinois Chamber of Commerce taxation broadcasts. The programs go on the air each Wednesday at 6:15 p. m., standard time. On August 10, George Scott, president of American Steel foundries, talked on "Taxes and the Industry of the State." Dean Charles M. Thompson, head of the School of Business, University of Illinois, will discuss the topic, "The Only Way Out," on August 17.

Seventy-five per cent of the state's refunds on blind pensions will be paid to the counties soon, it has been announced in State Auditor Oscar Nelson's office. The state is unable to pay the full refunds now because of the slowness of some counties in making their July 1 settlements with the state and because of the decrease in taxes. The remaining 25 per cent of the state refunds probably will not be paid until fall, as the next county settlement date is October 15. The state refunds half of what the counties pay in blind pensions.

The Mississippi Valley Structural Steel Co., of Decatur, has been awarded the contract for the super-structure of the Illinois river valley bridge at Marseilles, the state department of purchases and construction has announced. The contract price is $64,319. The Marseilles bridge is one of a series of structures to span the Illinois river, and is in line with plans for the early completion of the Lakes-to-Gulf waterway project.

Farm bureau day at the Illinois State fair, Springfield, will be observed as in past years on Friday, August 26. The Illinois Agricultural association has arranged to provide a large headquarters tent where members from the 95 organized counties in Illinois may check their wraps and packages, rest, see exhibits, and attractions and meet their friends. Simple but appropriate exhibits will reveal the work and accomplishments of the farm bureau in the state.

A STORY FOR BEDTIME

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER RABBIT was both happy and unhappy. That is a funny way to be, isn't it? But it was true. He was happy because he was trying to satisfy his curiosity. He is always happy when he is trying to do this. And he was unhappy because he didn't know how to go about it. You see he was trying to find the home of Rattles the Kingfisher and he didn't know just where to look for it. He knew very little about Rattles, who lives very much by himself and has little to do with the rest of the Quaddies. Peter had been told that Rattles makes his home in a hole in the ground. At first he didn't believe it. The idea of a bird living in the ground! But when Grandfather Frog said it was true Peter had to believe it because he has the greatest respect for what Grandfather Frog says. What Grandfather Frog doesn't know about his neighbors is hardly worth knowing, for he is very old and accounted very wise.

He had told Peter that he didn't know just where the home of Rattles was, because it was none of his business, and that if he had known he wouldn't have told Peter, because it was none of Peter's business. This was quite true, but I suspect that it made Peter all the more anxious to find that home. Peter is always interested in the affairs of other folks. He just cannot seem to help it. So he made up his mind to find the home of Rattles if it took him all summer. He began to suspect that it might. Hunting for a particular hole in the ground without any idea where it was likely to be was a good deal like hunting for a needle in a haystack. You see there are so many holes in the ground, some in the Green Forest, some in the Green Meadows, some in the Old Orchard, some in the Old Pasture, some around the Smiling Pool, some along the Laughing Brook, though he had never been there, he suspected that there were some along the Big River.

First Peter sat down and tried to remember all the holes of which he knew, and he knew of a great many.

In Plaid Gingham

This pretty costume for morning wear is worn by Miss Anita Louise, RKO-radio starlet. It is of plaid gingham with white cuffs and white lingerie bow of linen. All the accessories are in white to match.

You know he makes use of holes to escape from his enemies, and so he makes it his business to know about all the holes where he is in the habit of going.

"It must be a hole that some one else has dug," thought Peter, "because however could a bird with such little feet as Rattles Kingfisher has dig a hole? Of course it isn't a hole that anyone else is using, so it must be an old hole. I'll go visit all the old holes I know of."

Off he started, lipperty-lipperty-lip, to visit all the old holes he could remember on the Green Meadows and in the Green Forest. He didn't once stop to think that never had he seen Rattles on the Green Meadows or in the Green Forest, except along the Laughing Brook. If he had he would have saved himself a lot of trouble. But Peter is that way; he thinks of only one thing at a time. Just then it was holes in the ground. So he pretty nearly ran his legs off visiting all those old holes. Finally he just had to sit down and rest. He was tired and he was discouraged, but he was just as curious as ever, and he had no idea of giving up. Jimmy Skunk happened along just then. Although Peter didn't know it, Jimmy had been watching him for some time.

"Lost something?" inquired Jimmy. Peter looked at Jimmy with such a look of surprise that Jimmy laughed right out. "No, I haven't lost anything. Why do you ask?" said Peter. "You have been running about as if you were trying to find something, and so I thought you must have lost something," replied Jimmy, who didn't think anything of the kind, but said it just to find out what Peter would say.

For a few minutes Peter said nothing. He fairly ached to ask Jimmy if he knew where the home of Rattles was, but he was a little ashamed to. He knew that the chances were that Jimmy would tell him that it was none of his business. But at last he decided to risk it.

"I've heard," said he, "that Rattles the Kingfisher makes his home in a hole in the ground, and it seems such a funny thing for a bird to do that I have been visiting all the old holes I know of just to see if it is true, but I haven't found it yet. You don't happen to know where his home is, do you, Jimmy?"

"No," replied Jimmy, "and I don't want to know. But if I did I wouldn't spend my time on the Green Meadows or in the Green Forest. I'd look around these places where Rattles is most often seen. Did you ever see him very far from water?"

"No," confessed Peter; "I hadn't thought of that."

"Well, think about it now," replied Jimmy Skunk, and went on about his business.

THE CALL OF KIND

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I SAILED across the inland sea;
The smudge that is Chicago
rose
And beckoned merrily to me—
A city sees, a city knows
I had left hills of green behind
The hot gray pavement here to find.
"Your streets," I said, "are like a flame"
"And yet," Chicago said, "you came."

Yes, cities are as maidens are:
They know their charm, they know their lure;
And men may sail however far,
And breathe an air however pure,
And men may talk of huddled roofs,
And give you facts and give you proofs
That city walls are prison walls
That cage free men—yet something calls.

This calls; not roofs nor walls nor streets;

It is the calling of our kind;
For here the heart of Demos beats,
And here humanity you find.
The city calls to men who roam,
Whatever city is their home,
For "home" is not the only word—
It is the calling of the herd.

FOR THE INVALID

A DAINTY dish to serve an invalid is always appreciated, both by the invalid and the nurse, as one gets very tired of trying to think of appealing food and taking care of the ill at the same time.

Apple Delight

Peel and core an apple and cut it into eighths, stew until tender in a cupful of water to which has been added a pinch of salt and sugar to taste. Soften one teaspoonful of gelatin in four teaspoonfuls of cold water, add four teaspoonfuls of hot water and stir until the gelatin is dissolved. Add one teaspoonful of grapefruit juice, two teaspoonfuls of the sirup in which the apple was cooked. Place the apple in a cup and pour the prepared gelatin over it. Serve well chilled with whipped cream.

Standing Custard.

Soften one tablespoonful of gelatin in two tablespoonfuls of cold milk. Scald one cupful of milk in a double boiler, add one beaten egg and cook until thick. Pour this custard over the softened gelatin and add sugar and flavor to taste. Pour into a small mold and chill. Serve plain or with a fruit sauce.

Women Prefer Perfumed Hosiery

PERFUME now governs milady's choice of hosiery. Following tests recently made by the Commerce department in Washington, a Pittsburgh department store experimented with the influence of various perfumes on feminine taste in hosiery. It was discovered that women unconsciously select a perfumed stocking in preference to an unperfumed one. Most of them prefer a narcissus aroma. So perfumed hosiery will be soon be offered everywhere. The photograph shows a sales girl conducting the tests with Victoria Burdell and Jean Lewis.

SYNOPSIS

Ragged, and starving, a boy of about sixteen is found in the woods by a camping party, having fled from his brutal father, Bat Morryson. Fed, and in clean clothes, the boy Shad (Sheridan) is sent to Canton, with a letter to Colonel Blake. The colonel, his wife, and their young daughter Ruth, are impressed by the boy's manner. He goes to work in Amity Dam, and becomes friendly with a youth of his age, "Bony," and Bumpy Brown, tinkering, village character. Bat Morryson, determined to take his son back to his own dissolute life, is overruled by Colonel Blake, the district attorney, and his father passes out of Shad's life. A girl, young and pretty, comes to Brown's shack, inquiring for him. Shad applies himself diligently to his neglected education. Love for Ruth Blake takes a strong hold on his heart. In an attack made on the Perry family, Oscar Perry, the father, is fatally shot, and his daughter, Mrs. Doolittle, wife of Cyrus Doolittle, prominent citizen, seriously wounded. Circumstantial evidence points to Bumpy Brown as the assailant. He is arrested. The friendship between Shad and Ruth Blake kindles into love. Colonel Blake arranges for the youth to take up the study of law, under his guidance. New evidence points to Robert Royce as the possible murderer of Perry. Bumpy Brown is released on bail.

"I do everything just as the woman used to," he said. "I know it pleases her."

Bumpy and Shad sat down in the lamplight by the table. The room was warm and cozy. They began to talk of the great theme of the countryside.

Bumpy said: "I ain't goin' to ask no questions, but I can't help wonderin' what new idee the district attorney has got in his mind. He had evidence enough to hang me. Why didn't he go ahead? I've lived about long enough."

"He is an honest man. He could maybe satisfy the people by hanging you, but he has got to satisfy himself."

"I believe it. He is an honest man. I wonder what tree his mind has lit on."

Shad was quick to answer. "I don't know, but I wonder what tree your mind has lit on. I am not here to be a spy. I am your friend."

Bumpy held out his hand. "Put 'er there!" he said. "I'm certain no man ever had a better friend."

A silence followed. Shad broke it by saying: "Some one must have put those cartridges in your jacket. Some one threw that revolver into the river here in front of your house."

Bumpy arose from his chair and got a drink of water. Coming back to his chair he said: "It makes me mad. I could raise hell—I, but I'm in a fix where I got to keep still an' I'm a-goin' to. I'm willin' to die without a whimper but I won't talk. Don't ask me no questions an' don't tell what I've said. There's a God in Heaven. He'll have to settle this matter."

There was a moment of silence in which they heard only the whistling of the wind and the ticking of the clock.

Shad had brought books with him to read and study. Among them was Dickens' delightful story of Great Expectations. He proposed that he read it aloud.

"Go ahead," said Bumpy. "It'll be like old times. The woman used to read to me every night."

The boy began reading and the evening passed in a kind of magic spell. The clock struck eleven. Shad put down the book.

Bumpy let down a platform hinged upon the wall with folding legs on its outer corners. On this he put a small mattress and made a bed for the boy. He made up the lounge for himself, covered the bird's cage with a shawl, laid some hardwood sticks on the fire, bolted the door and put out the lights. Soon they were both asleep.

In the morning they left a warm fire in the stove to keep Dick comfortable and walked to Amity Dam.

"I guess I'd be more comfortable to home but I might as well know, first as last, what the People think o' Brown," Bumpy said as they started.

They found in the little village a chilly atmosphere in no way related to the weather. The children on their way to school followed them toward the store, whispering and staring curiously at the old man. A little snow, now melting, had fallen in the night. Two small boys across the street began to jeer and pelt him with snowballs. Shad and Bumpy mounted the steps in front of Smithers' store and entered. Mr. Smithers stood behind the desk at the end of the west counter. He shook hands with the boy, saying:

"Shad, I'm glad to see you, but I'd rather you wouldn't bring this man here."

"Why not?" Shad asked. "He's been released. I think that the district attorney has concluded that he isn't guilty."

"That may be," said the mild Mr. Smithers in a gentle tone. "I don't want to argue with you. We have our own opinions here. We who live near the scene of the murder ought to know something about it."

"We who have been working on the case ought to know something about it," Shad answered. "But I see that this is no place for Mr. Brown to be in. If you'll let him sit down cellar a little while, till this crowd of boys and girls have gone to school, I'll take him away."

"All right, take Mr. Brown down to the cellar," said Smithers in a lady-like tone as he wrung his hands. There was a note of irony in the words, "Mr. Brown." He added: "When you go please take him out by the hatchway."

There was a stern look in Bumpy's face when Shad led him down the dusty stairs to sit by the kerosene tank in the gloomy cellar.

"It's putty bad, ain't it?" said the old man as he wiped his eyes and blew his nose with his red handkerchief. "Them children are a kind of a weather-vane. G—d! I guess there's nobody that loves children as I do."

"It's bad but don't worry. There's a God in Heaven," the boy answered. "I'll come for you soon."

He returned to the store and bought his provisions and hurried up to Miss Spenlow's. They sat down together in the parlor. He told her of Bumpy's release and of what had happened on the street and in Smithers' store.

"It's an outrage," she declared. "You don't think he's guilty, do you?"

"I know he isn't guilty."

"Poor man! Everybody here will have it that he's guilty except Doctor Gorse and me. We have our own ideas. What will Bumpy Brown do? I have always been sorry for him in spite of his being such a drunkard."

"He Was a Good Story Teller. The Boys Liked Him."

"He doesn't drink any more."

"So Bony says, and I'm dreadful glad to hear you say it. He can't earn a living. There's such a feeling around here. There's almost nobody that would have him in the house. Poor creature! Perhaps I could get him into the Home for the Friendless."

"It will not be necessary. He'll be cared for. We shall know the truth before long and these fools will all be ashamed of themselves."

"I wish that I had time to tell you of the wonderful work that the Home for the Friendless is doing. Did you hear that Lydia Benson had asked me to be chairman of the infant committee?"

"Yes, I forgot to congratulate you."

"It's a wicked world," said Miss Spenlow. "I never dreamed how perfectly dreadful it was until I got into this work."

Shad smiled. He began to suspect that the great Miss Lydia Benson had had a somewhat humorous motive in making the appointment.

"I want you to go an' take that poor old man out of that horrid cellar and bring him here," said Miss Spenlow. "I'll go over and tell Doctor Gorse that you'll be here soon. He wants to see you."

The beloved doctor was at the little boarding house when Shad returned with Bumpy. The doctor greeted them with the grave, dignified and gentle courtesy for which he was famous. He turned to Miss Spenlow and said:

"I would like to talk privately with young Mr. Morryson. Perhaps you will take Brown into the dining room and close the door for a few minutes."

When he and Shad were alone the doctor said:

"The district attorney is not yet in the central current of the singular stream of events which has engaged his attention. There is one episode of which he may not have learned."

"On the fifth of November a stranger arrived in Ashfield. He was a brawny man about six feet tall, with a freckled face and large and prominent ears. He registered at the Westminister hotel as Donald Algryre from Winchester Springs, Ontario. When he arrived he wore a broad-brimmed hat. Later he wore a Scotch cap that had a parted crown and ribbons at the base, like those worn much in rural Canada. He

No Law Forbidding the Holding of Two Offices

It would not be illegal or unconstitutional for a person to fill two posts in the President's cabinet at the same time, says Pathfinder Magazine. In fact, during the early days of the Republic, it was not uncommon for a cabinet officer to act temporarily as head of an executive department other than his own. For instance, James Monroe served for a time in President Madison's cabinet as both secretary of war and secretary of state. John Marshall was chief justice of the Supreme court and secretary of state at the same time. He was secretary of state under President Adams when he was appointed chief justice and the President authorized him to continue his duties as secretary of state until Jefferson's inauguration a month later. That is the only time that the two highest appointive offices of the fedseemed to have no business. He had money. He spent it freely in the bar-rooms. He drank with all their cheerful habitués—the horsemen, the sports, the roustabouts. He had traveled much. He had been a cowboy in the wild West. He was a good story-teller. The boys liked him.

"Some one discovered that he carried a big revolver in his hip pocket. He went into the woods for a hunt with Royce. There Royce tells of seeing him throw a silver quarter in the air and shoot a hole in it with his revolver before it came down."

"Now in the early evening of the tenth of November he was seen in a canoe on the river. Roger Wingate, a patient of mine, and his young son, passed near him in a boat. The time was a quarter of seven or nearly that. It was rather dark. The boy had his father's dark lantern. He opened it suddenly and flung its light on the stranger. Here was unmistakably the man known as Algryre. Wingate had met him. He spoke but got no answer. Now the point at which they met was nearly opposite Brown's cove. Wingate thought nothing of the incident. It seemed to have no relation to the murder."

Shad was quick to say: "That man couldn't have got to Doolittle's house by seven o'clock."

"It would have been impossible. No suspicion of that ever entered the mind of my patient. He had forgotten the matter until the excitement of yesterday in Ashfield had begun to spread."

"What excitement?" Shad asked.

"Oh, you have not heard of it?"

"No, I left Canton early and was with Bumpy at his shack all yesterday and got here less than an hour ago."

"Well, a while back I had written to a classmate of mine at McGill university, who is in practice at Winchester Springs, Ontario. I had framed a theory and I wanted to learn what he knew about Donald Algryre. He answered promptly. No man of the name and description I had given was known in that village or in the country surrounding it. The genial stranger had vanished from our neighboring village. I was mystified. Detectives from Chicago arrived in Ashfield on the noon train yesterday. They were looking for the man described in this document."

He drew from his pocket a small poster containing a half-tone photograph and the following announcement:

"Reward of $5,000

"For information which will lead to the arrest of the famous bandit and bank robber, Reuben Smith alias John O'Brien alias Percival Roberts alias and lately Donald Algryre of whom this is a photograph. He is about six feet tall. He has large, bony hands and rather broad shoulders. His face is freckled, his hair red, his ears large and prominent. When last seen he was dressed in a dark and rather shabby suit. He wore a Canadian Scotch cap. Address communications to the police of your own town or to Allan Pinkerton, Chicago, Ill."

It will be remembered that Shad and Bony had seen the man so well described in the poster, sitting with Royce, Anderson and others at the Westminister hotel in the evening of the day of their successful hunt for the hats and the handkerchief. The boy read the words of Mr. Pinkerton with deep interest. A thought flashed in upon him.

He asked: "Do you know when this man was last seen in Ashfield?"

The doctor answered: "It is well known that his last appearance there was about seven o'clock in the evening of December 1. A telegram had been delivered to him that evening. He paid his bill. Royce ate supper with him. In a long ulster and yarn mittens he went out of the front door of the hotel with his two bags. The bellboy offered to help him but he said, 'No, thank you.' The door closed and he was gone. He had vanished. It would seem that no one got a glimpse of him after that. It is supposed that, somewhere near, a wagon was waiting for him."

"I think that I saw his hand and arm that night," said Shad.

He told the doctor of the singular event in Colonel Blake's office on the night of December 1.

"This is interesting," said the doctor gravely.

"But who was the woman in the buggy?" Shad asked.

Short Night

It was Willie's first ride in a railway train, and the succession of wonders reduced him to a state of continuous astonishment. The train rounded a slight bend and, with a shriek of its whistle, plunged into a tunnel.

There were gasps of surprise from the corner where Willie was. Suddenly the train rushed into broad daylight again, and a small voice was lifted in wonder.

"It's tomorrow!" exclaimed the small boy.—Christian Register.

IN EARLY HISTORY OF MODERN WORLD

All Continents United, Is Theory.

The Pacific ocean resembles a great pond, while the Atlantic ocean resembles a great river. This is one of the interesting pieces of evidence brought forward to support the Wegener hypothesis—the theory that all the continents were once united into a single continent.

Dr. Harlow Shapley, famous Harvard astronomer, has suggested sinking a three-mile shaft into the earth as a means of testing the Wegener hypothesis.

The evidence for the theory is summed up by Edwin Tenny Brewster in his interesting book, "This Puzzling Planet."

"Contrast the Atlantic ocean with the Pacific," he writes. "There are marked and curious differences between the two, though these are a good deal obscured by our ordinary maps and are best to be looked for on a globe."

"The Pacific is a round basin, a sort of gigantic pond, but the Atlantic is a sort of gigantic river that winds from the top of the earth to the bottom, always of about the same width."

"In fact," Brewster continues, "if one went by the shape of the coast on the two sides of the Atlantic one might well say that South America has cracked off from Africa, the eastern extension of Brazil once occupying the gulf of Guinea, the western end of the Sahara belonging to the Caribbean region, Greenland jammed up against the west coast of Norway and Newfoundland one of the British isles.

"If one could push the two Americas eastward and a little north, so that Greenland lay against Canada on one side and Norway on the other, with Newfoundland and the British isles pushed into the North sea, the fit would be surprising."

"There really is not a little reason for thinking that the uniform width of the Atlantic and the remarkable fit between its two sides is something more than accident. There is a good deal of evidence to show that during most of geologic time, and up to what for a geologist is rather a recent date, North and South America actually were parts of Europe-Asia-Africa but cracked loose and floated off."

The horse and the elephant are two good examples which support the theory of land bridges or an original united continent, David Dietz comments, in the New York World-Telegram. Fossil remains of the horse are found in certain rock layers slightly older in Europe.

The fossil elephant appears first in Africa and later in North America. Brewster believes the evidence is better for the Wegener hypothesis.

"The coal points very much to this theory," he writes. "The coal of Pennsylvania, New England and Nova Scotia is of the same age as that of the British isles, France, Germany and Spain, and is altogether very like it.

"Moreover, throughout these two coal districts, through the entire length of the Appalachian mountains on our side of the ocean and in Scandinavia on the other, the mountain ridges run northeast and southwest, as if they were all parts of the same system, and in various ways the rocks match surprisingly."

Human Side of Apes

Apes display several human passions. The gorilla will fly into a fearful rage. The orang is wonderfully affectionate to its young. Gibbons have a sense of humor. They delight in mischievous play and, being tailless, will, when they have the chance, pull other monkey's tails as a great joke. Chimpanzees have a gift which dogs have never been known to display—they can see a picture of themselves as a picture. They will recognize their own portraits, or grow excited if shown a study of a bunch of bananas. Among the gifts or powers which man possesses and apes lack it is remarkable that man can weep, but apes cannot.

Altogether Out of It

"Does his wife still play second fiddle to that other woman?" "She's not even in the orchestra."

Good manners consist, first, in not being fidgety or loud.

78.4% The University of Wisconsin conducted an extensive survey throughout the state to determine what departments of, and to what extent, country weekly newspapers were read. The investigation disclosed by a house-to-house canvass that advertising in these papers was read by 78.4% of the people in the homes the papers entered. The figures by classes of readers were: for men on the farm 83.3%; for women on the farm 78.3%; for men in the towns 69.6%; for women in the towns 82.6%.

MIDLOTHIAN PLAYS TINLEY AT TINLEY THIS SUNDAY

This coming Sunday there will be a baseball battle royal at Tinley Park when the Tinley team plays the Midlothian team. A very hot game is scheduled.

WILL COUNTY FARM BUREAU TEAM IN CHAMPION CLASS

The Will county farm bureau team champion of this district, continued its journey toward a state bureau title yesterday by defeating the Livingston county nine by a 4 to 1 score. The game was played at Wing, Ill.

The local outfit failed to score until the last inning of play, when a muffed fly by a Livingston fielder seemed to shatter their opponents' morale and the boys came galloping home with four runs.

Will county, defeated but once this season, will meet the Livingston team again next Saturday at Manhattan. If victorious the team will play another sectional winner and will continue thus until eliminated or until it obtains the state farm bureau championship early in September.

Last year the local team was defeated after winning the district crown. The team was beaten this year only by a Kankakee nine in a practice game at Kankakee. The Key city team however, was unaffiliated with the bureau league. This year's successful group of players are coached and managed by Robert Seeley of Manhattan.

ORLAND PARK

The ladies of St. Michael Church Orland Park, are preparing a chicken dinner to be served in the hall next Sunday, August 21st, at noon.

These dinners are justly famous for the quality of the food and the variety of dishes. No limit is set to the amount each patron can have except the capacity of the individual.

The dinner is served for the benefit of the church.

The firemen met Monday night and put the finishing touches to their plans for the big Labor Day picnic and parade they are sponsoring.

James Davidson attended the dance at Mokena Saturday night and reports a fine time.

Miss Blanch Miller enjoyed a very delightful time Monday night when a group of twenty-six of her friends surprised her in honor of her sixteenth birthday. The guests all congregated at the Purple Candle. Dancing was the big feature and took place in the show room of the Orland Electric Shop adjoining the Purple Candle. Miss Miller cut the birthday cake. She received a number of pretty gifts among them being a dainty wrist watch, a gift from her mother.

The Wabash railroad has a force of men employed here electric welding the joints of the steel rails on the main line track. The rails have been worn down at the joints and these worn spots are being built up by the welding process. Twelve miles of track are to be repaired extending from in front of the Orland Park depot to Brisbane south of New Lenox. It is expected that a month will be required to finish the job.

The work was begun Tuesday morning at Orland Park.

A number of pictures of the congregation of the St. Michael's church and of the Christ Lutheran church were taken Sunday for the rotogravure edition this paper is planning on issuing in the near future. On Monday night a picture was also taken of the birthday party of Miss Blanche Miller.

The highway from the Wolf road by the WNAT radio station southwest of Orland has been given a new crushed stone dressing the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Fruit have as week end guests their daughter and husband Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Greiger and Miss Anna Uziel of Chicago, and their grandson, Mr. Cecil Burs of St. Joseph, Mo. Cecil will make his home here indefinitely.

Historically Correct Sketches
By CALVIN FADER

THIS was one of Washington's docks, built for the handling of grain, tobacco, flour and other products, which he shipped in his own sloop to points on the Potomac. "Buy nothing you can make within yourselves" was his motto. He made plows, directed his blacksmiths, wood burners, shoemakers, weavers and in a season seined from the river close to one hundred thousand herring, marketing about eighty-five thousand of the catch.

Fort Necessity and Fort Frederick

Capt. George Washington

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

NOT the least interesting of all the celebrations held during this, the Washington bi-centennial year, was the dedication last month of a stockaded fort in a mountain meadow near Uniontown, Pa., as a national shrine to the Father of His Country. For this "little fort," consisting only of a log cabin circled by a log stockade, was Fort Necessity, where on July 3, 1754, George Washington began the military career which was to place his name among those of the great captains of all time and where, as the famous Voltaire expressed it, was fired the "cannon shot in the woods of America which set all Europe ablaze."

The affair at Fort Necessity had its origins in the clash between the British and the French for the control of the interior of the North American continent. To make good her claim to the Mississippi and Ohio valleys and to check the westward expansion of English settlement beyond the Alleghenies, the French had erected a fort at Presque Isle, now Erie, Pa., had built Fort Le Boeuf on French creek and had also seized the British trading post of Venango.

In 1753 Gov. Robert Dinwiddie of Virginia selected George Washington, then only twenty-one years old, for the difficult task of demanding that the French cease their encroachments upon "British soil." When Washington returned with the information that the French had no intention of giving up their forts, Dinwiddie decided upon more drastic action. Late in 1753 he sent a party of men under Captain Trent to build a fort at the Forks of the Ohio, where Pittsburgh now stands, and to hold it against any attacks which the French might make.

Both North Carolina and the home government had promised aid to the expedition, but when no troops had arrived by the last day of March, 1754, Dinwiddie ordered Washington and his 300 Virginians to proceed to the Ohio, "there to help Captain Trent build forts and to defend the possessions of his majesty against the attempts and hostilities of the French."

Meantime Trent's little company of 33 men had commenced a stockade at the Forks. But in April, a force of French and Indians arrived on the scene and made them prisoners. They were promptly released and allowed to return home without harm. Washington, coming to their aid, met the returning fort builders at Will's Creek, near the present city of Cumberland, Md.

By this time the French had extended Trent's work and pushed it to a rapid completion, calling their stronghold Fort Duquesne. Here had been gathered a considerable force of Canadians, French regulars and Indian allies, a detachment from which, led by Coulon de Jumonville, scouted Washington's advance. On May 28, at the head of a scouting party, Washington stumbled upon the small French scouting party. The Virginians immediately fired upon the French. Ten were killed, one wounded and 21 taken prisoner. Among the French dead was Jumonville.

The news of this encounter was carried to Fort Duquesne and its commander immediately sent out a force under Coulon de Villiers, a brother of Jumonville, to attack the English. Washington withdrew to Great Meadows, where he erected a fort. Although the place was unfit for defense, being surrounded on three sides by higher ground, which was heavily forested and afforded good shelter from which the enemy could fire down upon the defenders of the fort, Washington's force was so weakened by lack of ammunition and other supplies, that he considered it impracticable to retreat further. Hence the name of Fort Necessity as indicative of his desperate plight.

A contemporary account of what followed has been discovered recently in the Charleston (S. C.) public library in a copy of the South Carolina Gazette for August 22, 1754, which reads as follows:

"Williamsburg, Va., July 19.—On Wednesday last arrived in town, Col. George Washington and Capt. James Mackay, who gave the following account to his honor the governor, of the late action between them and the French, at the Great Meadows in the western part of this dominion.

"The third of this instant July, about 9 o'clock, we received intelligence that the French, having been reinforced with 700 recruits, had left Monongahela and were in full march with 900 men to attack us. Upon this, as our numbers were so unequal (our whole force not exceeding 300), we prepared for our defense in the best manner we could, by throwing up a small entrenchment, which we had not time to perfect before our sentinel gave notice, about 11 o'clock, of their approach, by firing his piece, which he did, at the enemy, and, as we learned afterward, killed three of their men, on which they began to fire upon us, at about 600 yards distance, but without effect; we immediately called all our men to their arms and drew up in order before our trenches, but as we looked upon this distant fire of the enemy only as an artifice to intimidate, or draw our fire from us, we waited their nearer approach before we returned their salute.

"They then advanced in a very irregular manner to another point of woods, about 60 yards off, and from thence made a second discharge; upon which, finding they had no intention of attacking us in the open field, we retired into our trenches and still reserved our fire, as we expected from their great superiority of numbers that they would endeavor to force our trenches, but, finding they did not seem to intend this either, the colonel gave orders to fire, which was done with great alacrity and undauntedness.

"We continued this unequal fight, with an enemy sheltered behind the trees, ourselves without shelter, in trenches full of water, in a settled rain, and the enemy galling us on all sides incessantly from the woods till 8 o'clock at night, when the French called to parley. From the great improbability that such a vastly superior force and possessed of such an advantage would offer a parley first, we suspected a deceit and therefore refused to consent that they should come among us; on which they desired us to send an officer to them and engage their parole for his safety. We then sent Captain Van Braam and Mr. Peyronnee to receive their proposals, which they did, and about midnight we agreed that each side should retire without molestation, they back to their fort at Monongahela, and we to Will's Creek; that we should march away with all the honors of war and with all our stores, effects and baggage. Accordingly, the next morning, with our drums beating and our colors flying, we began our march in good order, with our stores, etc., in convoy; but we were interrupted by the arrival of a reinforcement of 100 Indians among the French, who were hardly restrained from attacking us and did us considerable damage by pilfering our baggage.

"We then proceeded, but soon found it necessary to leave our baggage and stores; the great scarcity of our provisions obliged us to use the utmost expedition, and having neither wagons nor horses to transport them, the enemy had deprived us of all our creatures, by killing, in the beginning of the engagement, our horses, cattle and every living thing they could, even to the very dogs.

"The number of killed on our side was 30, and 70 wounded; among the former was Lieutenant Mercier, of Captain Mackay's independent company, a gentleman of true military worth, and whose bravery would not permit him to retire, though dangerously wounded, till a second shot disabled him and a third put an end to his life, as he was being carried to the surgeon. Our men behaved with singular intrepidity, and we determined not to ask for quarter, but with our bayonets fixed to sell our lives as dearly as possibly we could. From the numbers of the enemy, and our situation, we could not hope for victory, and from the character of those we had to encounter, we expected no mercy, but on terms that we positively resolved not to submit to. The number killed and wounded of the enemy is uncertain."

In the articles of capitulation, submitted by De Villiers which Washington signed, was one word which was to prove to be "diplomatic dynamite." It referred to the prisoners taken by Washington "dans l'assassinat du Sieur de Jumonville." The terms of capitulation were translated to Washington by Captain Van Braam, a Dutchman who seems to have had only a sketchy knowledge of the French language. He translated that passage as "the killing" or "death" of Jumonville, whereas the French interpretation of it was "assassination." Immediately the French raised the cry of treachery on the part of the young Virginian, asserting that Jumonville had been an ambassador bearing a peaceful message to the English in regard to the dispute over the western country, just as Washington had been a similar ambassador to the French posts in 1753, and that by Washington's own admission in the articles of capitulation he had "assassinated" this peaceful messenger.

The Reconstructed Fort Necessity

Ruins of Fort Frederick

As for Washington he was most decidedly "in bad" both at home and in England because his unfortunate expedition had apparently put the English in a very bad light. The result of this fiasco and other indignities which he suffered led him finally to resign his commission and it seemed that the military career of this future great leader was ended almost at its beginning.

However, his defeat did result in the resolution of the British ministry to force matters to a crisis, so there came about the arrival of Gen. Edward Braddock in America to command the combined British and Colonial forces which were to eject the French from the Ohio valley. The result of that expedition—"the bloody business of Braddock" it has been aptly called—is too well known to be dwelt upon extensively. Even though it did result in disaster on the banks of the Monongahela that July day a year later, it was Braddock who made Washington an aide-camp on his staff and who gave him his chance to win enduring fame while Braddock was winning only defeat and death. Not far from the reconstructed Fort Necessity is the place where Braddock was buried and a part of the dedication ceremonies held at Washington's little fort last month was the visit of a military attaché to the British embassy in the National Capital to Braddock's grave, there to lay a wreath in honor of the general with whom history has dealt so harshly.

But the reconstructed Fort Necessity is not the only post connected with the stirring events in those far-off times which the American of today can visit. Near Hagerstown, Md., is Fort Frederick which is also in process of reconstruction through the efforts of the Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce, and associated with it are the names of both Braddock and Washington. It was in Frederick Town, Md., that Washington first met Braddock on May 2, 1755, and two days later arrived with him at Winchester, Va., whence they set out for Fort Cumberland (Will's Creek), Md., on the beginning of his disastrous expedition.

After the defeat of Braddock the Indian raids along the frontier of Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia became so alarming that Gov. Horatio Sharpe of Maryland asked the colonial legislature for an appropriation for a strong fort to be erected in the western part of Frederick county, which was eventually granted. Upon receiving the grant, according to the correspondence of Governor Sharpe, "I am preparing to set off for the frontier, to put this province in the best provision of defense and that the bill will permit me and construct a strong fort and block houses for the protection of the North mountain. While I was at Fort Frederick, Colonel Washington paid me a visit and informed me that he was also raising a strong fort at Winchester. We already have 200 men near and about Fort Frederick under Colonel John Dagworthy. We face the bastions and curtains with stone and shall mount on each bastion a six pounder. . . ."

During the next two years, until the final capture of Fort Duquesne, Fort Frederick was a base for military supplies and a refuge for the inhabitants of that region when the red terror swept down upon them during the French and Indian war and again in 1763 when the conspiracy of Pontiac threatened to drive the hated English into the sea. The fort also played a part in the Revolution and the Civil war and now the people of Maryland hope to restore it and preserve it as a state shrine.

Lesson for August 21

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 33.
GOLDEN TEXT—And the Lord spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend.—Exodus 33:11.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Tent of Meeting.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Tent of Meeting.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Talking With God.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Becoming Aware of God.

1. The Divine Command to Possess the Land (vv. 1-6).

1. The abiding purpose (v. 1). They were to go up and possess the land despite the fact that the calf-worship had broken the bond between them and their God. God spoke of them as the people whom Moses brought up out of Egypt, not as his own people. They had not shown any true penitence for their awful sin. Therefore God could not claim them as his own.

2. Divine aid promised (v. 2). Though their sins made it impossible for God to go with them, still he agrees to help them by sending an angel before them to drive out their enemies.

3. The threatened withdrawal of the divine presence (vv. 3, 5). God said, "I will not go up in the midst of thee, for thou art a stiff-necked people, lest I consume thee in the way." The presence of God in the midst of a sinning and impenitent people would mean death unto them. The mercy of God is often strikingly shown by his withdrawal from his people.

4. The effect upon the people (vv. 4, 6).

a. "When the people heard these evil tidings they mourned." They knew that no angel could make up for the great loss of the personal presence of God. They called it "evil tidings." Surely no tidings are so evil as those which tell of the withdrawal of the divine presence.

b. They stripped themselves of their ornaments, showing that the articles which indicated gladness and joy could not be consistently worn when God had departed. We must be stripped of all that pertains to self and carnal pleasures if we would be clothed with the divine blessing.

II. The Tent of Meeting (vv. 7-11).

1. It was pitched outside of the camp (v. 7). As a token of the severed fellowship, the symbol of God's dwelling place, the tent of meeting was placed without the camp.

2. Moses in communion with God (vv. 8-10). Because Moses had not transgressed God's law, he still had fellowship with God. The visible sign to the people that God honored Moses was the descent of the "cloudy pillar" as Moses entered the tent of meeting.

3. Moses the friend of God (v. 11). This is one of the most beautiful expressions of personal fellowship to be found in all the Bible, if not in all literature. Friendship implies mutual confidence and sympathy, a disposition to share each other's secrets.

4. Joshua at home in the Tabernacle (v. 12). Joshua was not involved in the rebellion of the people. Because of his fidelity and in recognition of his unbroken fellowship, he was privileged to abide in the tent.

III. Moses' Prayer (vv. 12-23).

Moses' mind was somewhat perplexed, therefore he came to the Lord for the solution of his problem. God had said that he would send an angel to carry out his covenant obligation concerning the people in the possession of the land. Moses desired fuller knowledge of this angel so that he might act intelligently with reference to the matter. He asked for three things—

1. Fuller knowledge (vv. 12-14). In order to lead the people, he needed to know more fully his God. Intelligent and acceptable service is only possible as one knows God. God graciously responded to this request, "My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest."

2. "If thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence" (vv. 15-17). Moses was convinced that no substitute could take God's place even though that one were an angel. He argued that it would be better to perish in the wilderness than attempt to go into Canaan without God. God's presence today is necessary in order to convince the world that he has called us.

3. "Show me thy glory" (vv. 18-23). Moses wanted a new vision of God for his new task. To this request God responded by giving assurance that he would make his goodness to pass by Moses. God's supreme glory is his goodness.

Mokena had a fire scare Thursday morning when the fire siren blew.

A group of forty friends from Beverly Hills spent the day last Sunday with Mrs. A. C. Scheiblich and her son Howard. They came in the morning, bringing their dinner which they enjoyed eating under the grape arbor and on the spacious lawn. The day was a very pleasant one and all enjoyed the flowers growing in the various gardens and plots. Mrs. Scheiblich received a love letter "thank you" from one of the guests after their return home. It was in the shape of a letter with her lily pond surrounded with the evergreens and flowers painted by Miss Schultz and with the following verse attached:

"Who makes a Garden blesses all,
Refreshes, beautifies,
Wide open in fragrant praise,
A hundred flower eyes."

A hundred flower eyes. Francis Moriarty had built a bon fire and a strong wind carried sparks which lodged under some curled up wooden shingles on the garage roof and set the roof on fire. A few pails of water put the fire out.

All Set For the Ash Can Derby

"My bluff has certainly been called," says Stanley Rammell.

"From far and wide acceptances come pouring in to my challenge to the World for an automobile race against 'Oil Can' my $50 - 1922 Earle limousine. It is up to me to produce. The race will be held Sunday, September 4, at the Roby-Chicago Speedway."

Each evening finds Rammell at the one-mile oval testing his faithful "Oil Can" which he claims to be the worst looking wreck of the Chicago district.

Among other entries received is that of Mrs. J. Taylor. She says, "Allow me to take the liberty of accepting your challenge to a race. I will enter my Haynes Chummy Roadster that is so old that I don't know how old it is. The price of $50 would flatter it."

The race is assuming an international aspect as H. Yamashita has entered his 1913 Ford car "On-the-Spot" to uphold the honor of Nippon. Hammond will be represented by Ray Nelson who said, "About reading about your old car I feel no qualms about entering my Ford of 1916 vintage in your race. I would sell it to anyone who is no friend of mine for $50. My sympathies to you."

J. C. Wiseman says, "I'll leave you behind in my Studebaker Roadster imported from South Bend, Indiana. It was built before the War but not before the Civil War, being a 1917 creation. If I can assemble some lost parts before the race I will agree to enter."

B. Ward Beam who is accepting entries at 1032 East 46th Street said that his first prediction was that there would be 75 entries but he now feels there will be double that number as the "Ash Can Derby" has really become a fixture at the Roby-Chicago Speedway since its running last year, and the manager says that the race will not be run as it was last year but he will give the drivers something new to shoot at, and the Fifteen automobile race drivers have already entered the automobile races at this early date and twenty-two motorcycle riders have signified their intention of starting in the first motorcycle race that has been run in this part of the country in a number of years. The stock car events which are open to stock and semi-stock car models is expected to attract more than a dozen of the leading stock car drivers.

This will be the biggest program that has ever been given at the Roby-Chicago Speedway and it is expected to attract the largest crowd that has ever witnessed an event over the fast oval.

FRANKFORT

The Frankfort Volunteer Fire Department met Wednesday August 16 at the village hall. A resolution was adopted that the fire truck shall not be used at fires outside of the village limits. This action was taken to prevent an increase of the fire insurance rates which the village property owners are now paying.

Outside fire protection can be accomplished by a solely community fire equipment to be used outside of village limits.

All those who still consider remaining a member of the Frankfort Volunteer Fire Department are requested to be present at a special meeting to be held Sept. 12th at the Frankfort village hall at 8 p. m. sharp. This notice is final.
